PRICE TWO CENTS

ANOTHER CHARGE AGAINST SWISHER

Henryville Man Arraigned at Jeffersonville Friday and Continuance is Granted.

HEARING SET FOR APRIL 25.

Denied That He is Guilty of Kidnapping Richardson Girl—Tells Conflicting Stories.

Edward Swisher of Henryville, who was arrested at Indianapolis Wednesday night upon a charge of kidnapping, is held in the Clark county jail at Jeffersonville awaiting his hearing which has been set for April 25. He was arraigned Friday and his request for a continuance was granted. When arrested Swisher was in company with Bertha Richardson, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Richardson, of Henryville. Chief of Police Abell went to Indianapolis after him and returned him to Henryville where he was held until Friday when he was taken to Jeffersonville.

In the warrant of arrest Swisher was charged with kidnapping, but an additional warrant has been made out charging him with enticing a female under the age of consent. The prisoner denies any wrong and told Chief Abell that if the girl told the truth on the witness stand she would admit that she was badly treated at home. When the girl was questioned at Indianapolis after the arrest she told the officers that her parents mistreated her, but later refuted the statement and said that they had always given her good care. She was employed as a telephone operator at her home.

Swisher has a wife living at Terre Haute, although he told the Indianapolis police that they are divorced. He told Chief Abell on the trip to Henryville that he intended to take the girl to Logansport and find employment for her and that she expected to attend school later. He further added that he cared for the girl and that he had intended to marry her as soon as he was divorced from his wife and the girl was a little older. Swisher and his wife have not been living together for some time, but is not known whether or not they have been divorced.

The prisoner told the officers at Jeffersonville, when questioned about the case that he did not intend to wrong the girl and only wanted to "take a little trip." He also told them that he did not intend to marry her.

"She is a perfect little lady," said Swisher, "and I don't believe the court will give me any trouble when I tell the truth, that is, I simply intended being nice to the girl."

Swisher and the girl left home Wednesday afternoon and came here on a traction car. They drove to Jonesville where they purchased tickets for Indianapolis. Shortly after the train left Jonesville her parents were informed of the trip and asked Chief Abell to make an investigation. When he found that they had started to Indianapolis he telegraphed to the police there and the man was arrested as he stepped from the train. The girl was returned to the home of her parents.

CLAIRVOYANT MAY NOT BE TRIED AT INDIANAPOLIS

Chief Abell Informed That Victor A. Bernard May be Released at Any Time.

Chief of Police Abell has been informed that Victor A. Bernard, the clairvoyant, who is held at Indianapolis on a larceny charge, may be released at any time, and was asked if the prisoner should be held on the affidavit filed here. Bernard was arrested at Indianapolis several months ago, and was released on bond. Before his trial was held, however, he left the city and was located at Denver several weeks ago. He was returned to Indianapolis for trial.

Since the clairvoyant was brought back to Indianapolis some of his relatives, who, it is understood, are wealthy, came to his assistance and paid the losses. The persons who were back of the prosecution have agreed to drop the case, it is reported. Bernard is said to be the same man who operated here last summer under the name of "Prof. Keller." He left the city with about $500, his scheme being to take a sum of money from each client so he could "magnetize" it, and in this manner tell their fortunes.

Chief of Police Abell informed the police superintendent that an affidavit had been prepared against Bernard, and that it was desired that he be held. In case the clairvoyant is not found guilty in Marion county he will very likely be compelled to answer to a charge in this county. Sheriff Robertson has also notified the sheriff of Marion county to hold the man.

The man, who was seventy-eight years of age, made no complaint of feeling ill and it is supposed his death was due to heart failure. His name and address were obtained from books and papers found in his pockets. His body was left at Medora. He boarded the train at the Seymour station.

YOUNG MEN WANTED FOR POSTOFFICES

Believed That President Will Not Appoint Applicants Who Are Over Fifty.

NOTICE ISSUED TO CONGRESS

"Plum" Will be Distributed Among Men Who Will Promise to "Stay on the Job."

A new light may be thrown upon the post office fight here if the order issued Friday by the department at Washington regarding the age limit is strictly followed in making the appointment. The President believes that the "plums" in this department should be given only to young men, who will promise to "stay on the job."

The Washington dispatch says: "Wanted—Young men for postmasters who will guarantee in writing that they will work at the job. Old men need not apply."

The first notice in the history of the government drawing the age line on applicants for postoffices was sent today to Indiana members of Congress. Every Indiana representative received a letter from Daniel C. Roper, first assistant postmaster general, in which he says:

"I am directed by the postmaster general to request that you furnish for the files of this department all papers in your possession touching the suitability of persons whose names have been, or will be, recommended by you for postmasters. These papers should indicate the character, occupation and age of each person recommended and furnish over the signature of the applicant the assurance that if appointed, he will give the service his personal attention."

When members of the Indiana delegation sought the postmaster general for an interpretation of this rule they learned some facts which surprised them. They were informed that the President intends to appoint clean and competent young men, or at least, men who have not reached the sear and yellow time of life.

The word "age" is inserted in the notice advisedly, as the President proposes to bring about an infusion of young, vigorous blood in the post-offices of the country. Several of the Indiana representatives will have to revise their lists of proposed recommendations because of this age feature. In one district an applicant for a presidential postoffice is over 80 years old.

The Hoosier members of Congress gather the impression that the President, as a general proposition, will consider applicants "Oslerized" who are over fifty and will try to recruit the service from men who are around forty, although, of course, it will be necessary to make exceptions in certain cases.

The Roper notice also is highly significant as showing that the President will desire other evidences of the suitability of applicants other than the mere recommendation of the member of Congress. Another entirely novel requirement is that making the aspirant sign an application for the position he seeks and agree that he will give his personal attention to the duties.

Nothing even remotely resembling this set of requirements ever has been exacted by any former administration. Complaint has been rather general that postmasters have given but little personal attention to their offices, in many cases being absent from their posts of duty for weeks at a time. All this the Wilson administration proposes to change.

Members of the Indiana delegation began this afternoon to send letters to postoffice aspirants whom they intend to recommend, advising them that they must prepare and forward applications in writing, attaching thereto their personal promise that that will stay "on the job" if appointed.

Taylor Wilson, chief mail clerk on the Pennsylvania lines between Indianapolis and Louisville, was here from Louisville this morning on his way to Sparksville where he will stay until he has recovered from the injuries he received in the wreck of Wednesday near Indianapolis, when the engineer, John Yunker lost his life. Mr. Wilson received injuries on the head and left arm besides a severe nervous shock. Mrs. Wilson and son accompanied him and as soon as they reached this city he was taken to a hotel where he could rest until the arrival of his train, which was several hours late.

Clayton Brown and daughter, Miss Alta and Mrs. Charles Brown of Washington passed through here this morning enroute to Troy, O. to attend the burial of Mrs. Clayton Brown, who died there suddenly two weeks ago, and on account of the flood, the family were unable to reach there. The body was placed in the vault to await their arrival. Mrs. Brown was a sister of Mrs. W. J. Durham and a relative of the late Jason Brown of this city.

Rev. William A. Schuff, pastor of the German M. E. church, returned today from Quincy, Illinois, where he represented the Central Conference of the German M. E. church at the annual meeting of the trustees of the Old People's Home. The Home is maintained by the church. The meeting was in session during the week.

Mrs. Bertha Quamby left this morning for her home in Bradford, O. She was called here three weeks ago on account of the illness of her mother, Mrs. H. B. Jones. In about a month she will return to keep house for her father.

Mrs. E. Sewell went to Brownstown this morning to see her father, John Boltman, who has been quite sick from a fall he received three weeks ago. He is ninety-four years old and his family have been alarmed about his condition.

Miss Marie Boas came from Vallonia Friday afternoon and was the guest over night of her brother, Ralph Boas and wife. She left this morning for Terre Haute to enter State Normal.

Robert, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Keach, is ill with pneumonia.

Miss Arleen McGowan is quite sick with the measles.

MUST MAKE EFFORT TO DESTROY RATS

Owners of Infested Buildings Charged by Law With This Pleasant Duty.

INSPECTORS MAYBE EMPLOYED

Governor May Annually Set Aside One Day in Spring to be Observed In State as "Rat Day."

The famous rat bill passed by the last Legislature, and which was fathered by Senator Ratts, is drastic in its provisions. There is a question about the validity of some of its sections but in the main its constitutionality is not questioned.

Senate Bill 171 (Chapter 220), approved March 14, is the "rat bill," introduced by Senator Ratts. It forbids the owner of any building, grain stack, water craft, etc., to permit the same to become "rat infested," and requires good faithful efforts to exterminate and destroy rats where the owner has knowledge they are in his property.

It also makes it the duty of school officers to provide "for the illustrative teaching of the anatomy, physiology and hygiene of the human system the effects of alcohol and nicotine; the cause and course of consumption; the dissemination of diseases by rats, flies and mosquitoes, and the effects thereof, and the prevention of diseases by the proper selection and consumption of food."

Health officers are given authority to "enter into and upon all lands, places, buildings, structures, vessels, or water crafts" to ascertain whether they are infested with rats and whether the owner is duly attempting to exterminate the same, but no "dwelling, hotel or rooming house shall be entered for such purpose, except between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m."

County, city and town officers may appropriate money to purchase poison, traps and other materials to destroy rats, and may employ and pay inspectors to work, under the direction of the local health officer, who shall have authority to work on both public and private property, and "to remove parts of floors, walls, or other parts of buildings or structures, or to remove from one place to another on the premises any other property when reasonably necessary to do so," taking reasonable steps to restore the premises so far as practicable, to their former condition. Neglect of any property owner to exterminate and destroy rats in his property shall authorize the health officers and inspectors "at once to cause such nuisance to be abated by exterminating and destroying such rats," the expenses to be paid by the county, town or city, but to be placed on the tax duplicate as an assessment against such property. No bond is required of any health officer in addition to what he may have given, if any, upon his appointment. The Governor may annually, in the spring, "designate by official proclamation a day to be designated as 'rat day,' to be observed throughout the state as a day for exterminating and destroying rats" on public property and private premises. Any health officer or inspector "shall have the right, without a warrant, to enter upon or into any land, place, building, structure or premises suspected of being rat infested, for the discovery or destruction of rats," and interference with him is punishable by a fine of from $2 to $10. Some attorneys say that this provision is in conflict with the Constitution which says that "the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable search or seizure, shall not be violated and no warrant shall issue but upon probable cause supported by oath or affirmation," and that "no man's property shall be taken by law without just compensation."

Any violation of the provisions in the matter of failing to exterminate rats, and the duties of school officers to cause the subjects above mentioned to be taught is punishable by a fine of from $10 to $100.

There is no emergency clause.

GAYNOR WANTS NOMINATION

Would Like to be Mayor of New York City for Four Years More.

New York, April 19.—Although Mayor Gaynor's friends are working hard for his renomination, it is not generally believed that he will be named again by any ticket that has a chance to win him. Voters with no feeling whatever against the Mayor for the mistakes he has made during his administration say that he is too old to attempt another four year term of office as a head of a city like New York with its increasing responsibilities. It is not even certain that the fusion forces will be able to nominate against the Mayor their choice, District Attorney Whitman. Although the District Attorney has announced his willingness to be a candidate for mayor, great pressure is being brought upon him to remain in his present office and finish cleaning up the city. The results Mr. Whitman has already accomplished have been so great that he is believed to be the only man who could continue the fight with such success.

HOLDS IT TO BE CONSTITUTIONAL

Corrupt Practices Act Upheld
By Supreme Court.

LOWER COURT IS REVERSED

Appeal Arising in Floyd County Following the Quashing of Indictments Against Prosecuting Attorney Based Upon Alleged Infractions of the Act of 1911 Has Been Affirmed by the State's Highest Court.

Indianapolis, April 19.—The Indiana supreme court has rendered a decision holding that the corrupt practices act of 1911 is constitutional and that it "contains no exceptions but everyone is made guilty of corrupt practices who gives anything of value to any person for the purpose of influencing the vote of anyone at an election or primary election."

The ruling is made in reversing the Floyd circuit court for quashing an indictment against John M. Paris, the present prosecuting attorney of Floyd county, for giving Andrew Buckingham $2 to work for the nomination of Paris to the office of prosecuting attorney at the Democratic primary election in the spring of 1912.

Paris was successful at the primary and defeated the occupant of the office, Walter V. Bulleit, then prosecuting attorney. The grand jury instituted an investigation, which resulted in the return of twelve indictments against Paris for the alleged hiring of precinct workers.

Paris asked for a change of judge, and Judge H. C. Montgomery, who was appointed, quashed all of the indictments. From this the defeated prosecutor appealed, filing twelve appeals in the supreme court against Paris and ten against Sittason, clerk.

The supreme court affirmed one of the cases, but it is generally supposed that the decision of one may rule the decision of all, as they are all founded on the charge of hiring precinct workers. If the other decisions follow the one just handed down they will result in the prosecuting attorney of the county being under twelve indictments and the clerk of the court having ten criminal indictments pending against him.

It was contended by the defendants that the title of the corrupt practices act was not sufficient to cover any penalty for the violation of its provisions, but the supreme court says that the title is general, covering all corrupt practices at elections and primaries, and the penalty is sufficiently covered.

State Board of Pharmacy Takes Action at Bloomington.

Bloomington, Ind., April 19.—When the trials of Harry Wood, H. B. Col-win and George Bockman, pharmacists of this city, were called before the members of the state board of pharmacy in session here, it was agreed with the board that the record should show a trial and finding of guilty in each case. That the board would take the matter under advisement for thirty days and then enter an order revoking the license of each of the defendants. The order further requires that during the thirty days the stores where they are employed shall not handle intoxicating liquors and if information comes to the board that this rule is being violated, the revocation shall be made at once. Each of the defendants was charged with posting his certificate where liquor was illegally sold. Every member of the state board was present at the hearing.

Young Woman Accidentally Shot.

Wabash, Ind., April 19.—Lucile Mor-cidentally pulled the trigger of the CONSERVATIVES WIN STRUGGLE IN D. A. R.

Mrs. Story Leads Insurgents to Victory.

Washington, April 19.—As head of the conservative faction, Mrs. William Cumming Story of New York was elected president general of the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, defeating Mrs. John Miller Horton of Buffalo, the administration candidate, on the third ballot.
The vote stood: Mrs. Story, 600;
Mrs. Horton, 449.

The successful candidate was escorted to the platform, where she was greeted by Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, retiring president general. She made a plea for harmony and urged all the new general officers to do their utmost to bring peace between the factions that have waged an almost continuous warfare for the last five years.

Before closing her remarks, Mrs.
Story introduced Mrs. Charles B. Bryan of Memphis, who withdrew as a contestant before the third ballot was cast. Mrs. Bryan had been known as an administration sympathizer, but she pledged loyalty and support to the incoming administration. She was followed by the new general officers, and all pledged their support to Mrs.
Story.

IGNORED THEIR PROTESTS

House Caucus Gives Cold Comfort to Life Insurance Companies.

Washington, April 19.—Protests made by mutual life insurance companies against alleged injustices imposed on them by the income tax provision of the Underwood tariff bill were ignored by the Democratic caucus of the house of representatives.
The entire income tax provision of the tariff bill was adopted with only a few minor changes, and this means it will be passed by the house.

The protests of the insurance companies which set up the complaints that the income tax provision taxes them excessively will be given expression in the senate.

An effort was made to place boots and shoes on the dutiable list, but amendments to this end were hooted down and these products remain on the free list. The provision placing raw rubber and raw silk on the free list also was adopted. All that now remains to be considered in the Underwood bill is the section embracing the administrative provisions, and this probably will be disposed of tonight.

PROTECT YOUR FAMILY

If you buy your land through my office in Benkelman, it means "INDEPEN-DENCE" to YOU in LIFE, and INDEPENDENCE to YOUR FAMILY at your death. I will enter into a contract and endorse right on your Mortgage that if you die before you get your land paid for, that all indebtedness is canceled and your family gets clear title to your land, thereby putting them in good circumstances. I know just how a man feels about going into debt and worrying about leaving his family in debt should anything happen to him.

These worries are things I am striving to alleviate for my patrons, and under my plan you have no such worries. Buy of me such a place as you want, pay what you can and make the balance up in yearly payments. If you live you know you can handle it, you know you can make your payments. Should you die, the Mortgage reads right on the face of it, that it is "PAID IN FULL" and your family starts off free from debt.

Moral: "Buy land of Matteson of Benkelman." He always stands by you.

Come, look over my lands, pick on a place for yourself and become a booster for this great land of opportunity, where you are independent through life, and your family is independent after your death. My new list and map sent free upon request.

"Dame Fortune does not tease men to shake her jeweled hand, nor does opportunity entreat her acceptance."

"THE CAR WITH A CONSCIENCE"

"The Most Beautiful Car in the World---and Mechanically Correct"

The National Automobile Shows rendered this verdict.

At the New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Detroit and Cleveland exhibitions, the Oakland proved to be the real surprise of the new season.

Oakland models were so distinctive, so different from the common type of automobiles that the difference was apparent even to the casual observer.

Don't scoff at this statement! Don't belittle it! Don't wink your eye and say "That's what they all claim." Don't say "It's a common automobile story!" Don't say "It's impossible for the Oakland to have achieved a position like this!"

Don't say any of these things but make us prove our claims.

That's the faith we have in your good judgment and the faith we have in Oakland Cars.

The 1913 Oakland symbolizes both life and character. Its life is expressed in beautiful lines, full of color, harmonious and exquisite. Its character is embodied in a sound mechanical principle—scientific and lasting.

You cannot find a harsh line on any Oakland body. You cannot find a long straight line. Each body is a delight to the eye, for each one represents a combination of sensitive curves, very beautiful, blending symmetrically.

Oaklands are made in a wide range of body designs and horse power ratings. Four and six cylinder types—Models 35, 42 and 6-60. Four, five and seven passenger touring cars. Three passenger sociable roadsters coupes and a semi-racer called "Six-Sixty Race-about."

MANUFACTURED BY OAKLAND MOTOR CAR CO.
PONTIAC, MICHIGAN.

The above is a cut of the new Studebaker "35" which has attracted attention this spring in automobile circles. It is a handsome, well designed car, and is equipped with all the latest conveniences. It is known as a six-passenger car, but will accommodate a party of seven in a very comfortable manner. The car is built for service and will develop great power on hard pulls.

Nothing will be found missing on this machine that would add to the pleasure of automobiling. It is adapted for either business or pleasure trips and is so simple that any one can operate it without difficulty. The new electric starter has obviated the trouble so often experienced in cranking. The engine may be started by simply pulling a small lever which puts the starting motor in operation. The motor will run for thirty minutes, if necessary, the current being supplied from a storage battery which is automatically recharged when the engine is running.

The car is lighted with electricity, all the lamps being connected with small switches which are conveniently placed within the reach of the driver. The motor runs smoothly and quietly and can scarcely be heard a few feet away.

This machine, with all of its improvements, marks the advancement made by the Studebaker Company. The firm was organized years ago for the manufacture of wagons and when the automobile came into demand the Studebaker Brothers were equal to the occasion and at once placed the machine on the market. They believed that the car would grow in demand each year, and from the start made the best machine possible. The company has not been disappointed in this belief, and have endeavored to provide the Studebaker owners with every convenience needed.

The McCoy Garage, the local representative of the Studebaker Company, is more than pleased with this machine and expects to sell a number this summer. The first has been sold to M. S. Blish, who purchased a smaller model for his sons last summer.

BIG DEMOCRATS BURY HATCHET

Bryan and Clark Once More Are Friends.

THEY SMOKE THE PEACE PIPE

Friends of the Estranged Secretary of State and Speaker of House Have Succeeded in Effecting a Reconciliation of the Differences Between the Two Which Grew Out of the Clash of Interests at Baltimore Convention.

Washington, April 19.—William J. Bryan and Champ Clark have wept on each other's shoulder and made up. After elaborate negotiations covering several days the two were brought together at a luncheon yesterday afternoon for the first time since the falling out at the Baltimore convention which resulted in the overthrow of the Clark boom and the nomination of Woodrow Wilson. The two clasped hands, broke bread together and issued statements.

The Bryan statement is plainly apologetic. The secretary of state says in effect: "You were all right, Champ; it was the company you were keeping that I objected to."

The speaker in his statement concedes nothing, except that Mr. Bryan now has done all that he can do to repair the injury inflicted at the Baltimore convention, and concludes by saying: "I can only repeat what I have publicly declared time and time again, that all personal or selfish considerations must give way to the duty that all Democrats owe to our party and to our country."

The harsh feelings between Clark and Bryan have been one of the danger spots in the Democratic situation. The speaker came out of the Baltimore convention vowing he never again would have anything to do with Colonel Bryan. Clark on every occasion showed his bitter feeling toward the commoner. No sign of recognition passed between the two on inauguration day, when they were only a few feet apart at the ceremonies, and it was an open secret that Mr. Clark's friends feared his intense bitterness might carry him beyond the proprieties whenever the two should meet face to face. This hostility has been one of the chief embarrassments to the Wilson administration up to this time. Bryan always has shown a conciliatory spirit, but Clark held aloof until his friends took up the negotiations which led to the reconciliation.

At the luncheon were Vice President Marshall, Secretary of the Interior Lane, Senator Kern of Indiana, Senator O'Gorman of New York, Secretary to the President Joseph P. Tumulty, Representative Crisp, Assistant Secretary of State Osborne, Dudley Field Malone, third assistant secretary of state; Theodore A. Bell of California, Thomas F. Logan and C. L. James of Alaska.

Mr. Bryan was a little late in reaching the luncheon, all the other guests having assembled. He entered the room shaking hands with each one, until in the natural order he came to Mr. Clark. He extended his hand and the speaker grasped it with seeming cordiality. Then the party sat down and broke bread. Everybody, including Secretary Bryan and the speaker, had a story on tap and the affair passed off without any reference to the Baltimore convention or to past performances.

Successor Already Picked Out. Indianapolis, April 19.—Governor Ralston has announced that he will appoint Bert Winters, his law partner in Lebanon, to succeed John A. Boltz of Winchester as Republican member of the state board of accounts when Boltz's term expires in July.

Commenting on a Terre Haute farce in the courts where a man was acquitted of murder on a plea of insanity and later released as sane, the Fort Wayne News remarks:

"The truth is that in Indiana today the crime least likely to be punished is that of murder. Indeed, one is comparatively safe in committing this offense, especially if he has a little money and a few friends. Capital punishment has gone entirely out of style and a life sentence has become a joke. It means nothing and it is imposed in purely Pickwickian sense. Still, a majority of those who are guilty of homicides escape even the inconvenience of that little formality. They are acquitted outright or are allowed to escape in some such manner as this red-handed Morgan escapes. Is it any wonder that the crime of murder is showing an alarming increase in this state? Is it any wonder that our laws are held in contempt? The situation is one that calls for the serious consideration of all thoughtful citizens."

DIGNITY OF THE HOUSE RUFFLED

Banker Makes an Assault Upon Representative.

A SENSATION AT WASHINGTON

President Glover of the Riggs National Bank of Washington, Offended by a Remark Made in the House by Representative Sims of Tennessee, Attacks Congressman on the Street and Delivers Several Blows to Face.

Washington, April 19.—President Charles C. Glover of the Riggs National bank of this city, and one of the most prominent citizens of Washington, assaulted Representative Thetus Willette Sims, a Democrat of Tennessee. Sims had attacked Glover on the floor of the house a few months ago, charging that he was the head of a group of men who had worked Rock Creek park off on the government at a big personal profit.

The banker banged Sims several times in the face and head, but the congressman got off without any apparent injury except a loss of dignity. Glover came out of the fracas without a scratch, and witnesses say that Sims did not do any punching.

The attack took place in Farragut Square park as the two men were on their way to their offices after having eaten happy and peaceful breakfasts. Glover apparently was determined to give the congressman a good walloping, but was prevented from finishing his work by the interference of Sherman Allen, former assistant secretary of the treasury, and Captain Charles E. McAllister of the revenue cutter service. Admiral Dewey and Secretary of War Garrison also were passing through the park just in time to get a glimpse of the bout between the banker and the congressman.

After it was over Sims picked up his hat, dusted it and took a car for the capitol. Glover returned to his home on Farragut square to compose himself and straighten his necktie before proceeding to his office.

Mr. Glover is sixty-three years old, but is a very active, athletic man. He is about five feet ten and weighs around 185 pounds. Sims is sixty-one, a little shorter than Glover, but of good weight, although he carries a big part of it under his vest.

An assault upon a member of the house is a serious offense and can be dealt with summarily by the house as a case of contempt. Mr. Sims said that he did not intend to take any action against Glover, but some of the representative's colleagues declare that charges will be brought. Mr. Glover apparently is not alarmed at the prospect of proceedings against him.

Mr. Sims said: "I have no intention of bringing the case to the attention of the house. Glover wants notoriety. He would be glad to be hauled before the bar of the house for the notoriety it would give him."

Representative Sims is chairman of the house committee on war claims and a member of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce, but he has taken a keen interest in discussions relating to the affairs of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Glover has been president of the Riggs bank since its organization in 906. The Riggs bank is affiliated with the National City of New York and is one of the best-known banks in the United States.

ON THE ROAD TO RECOVERY

The Pope Is Reported to Be Improving Daily.

Rome, April 19.—The consoling news from the vatican is that Pope Pius has passed three days without fever, that his general condition is progressing favorably, and that if these conditions continue for two days more his holiness will be considered convalescent and the bulletins of the physicians discontinued.

The optimism in regard to the pope's condition has increased to such an extent that Cardinal Merry Del Val, who has been nicknamed the vice pope, held the customary diplomatic reception in the pope's ante-chamber instead of in his own apartment. Prof. Marchiafava also strengthened the optimism by declaring that the pontiff was only suffering from an attack of influenza. His heart was sound and the doctor declared that he never had any doubts as to his recovery. The cheerfulness of the pope has returned and he is reported as having asked to be allowed to resume the taking of snuff.

There are still quite a number of cases of measles in the city, but all of them are in mild form. Local physicians declare that this is a good time of the year for children to have this disease, and especially so this year because of the light type.

For rheumatism you will find nothing better than Chamberlain's Liniment. Try it and see how quickly it gives relief. For sale by all dealers. Advertisement.

DO NOT SPRAY TREES WITH POISONOUS SUBSTANCES

Warning of State Entomologist—Insect Pollination Is Essential This Year.

C. H. Baldwin, state entomologist, has issued a bulletin to Indiana farmers and horticulturists, in which he warns them not to spray trees with poisonous substances, such as arsenate of lead, while the trees are in bloom. The recent heavy rains have done much to keep down wind pollination of the various trees. Mr. Baldwin asserts, and the insect pollination is about all that remains to insure productivity in the trees.

"The value of cross fertilization or pollination in plants to produce healthy seeds and perfect fruit is appreciated by many," the state official writes.

"If the weather conditions are favorable for the pollen to be carried by the wind, a great deal of cross fertilization will result thereby; but if there should be considerable rain during the blooming period of the fruit trees, whatever cross pollination is done must be accomplished by insects carrying the pollen grains from one flower to another on the same tree and from the flowers of one tree to those of another. There are so few insects that visit flowers at this season of the year that the work of carrying the pollen must be accomplished almost entirely by the honey bee. To use a poisonous spray such as arsenate of lead, while the trees are in full bloom is not only a poison to the bees that visit the sprayed blossoms, but will also hinder the distribution of the pollen grains by any other agency."

GERM CAUSES RHEUMATISM.
Chicago Physician Says He Has Found the Bacteria.

That rheumatism is caused by a germ is the theory of Dr. Edward C. Rosenow of Rush Medical college, Chicago, who also says he has discovered the identity of the hitherto unknown bacteria.

Dr. Rosenow made known his discovery for the first time in describing his work to the staff of the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute. He said he based his theories on experiments made upon rabbits, into which he had injected rheumatic germs taken from human beings.

He said he found the tonsils of several patients inflamed. When bacteria from the tonsils were injected into the rabbits the identical symptoms developed, he said.

"There is nothing to indicate that rheumatism may be transmitted through the air," said Dr. Rosenow, "and I believe the germs lurk in food and first lodge in the tonsils."

Dr. Rosenow's discoveries will be the basis of experimental work in search of a cure for rheumatism.

WILL NOT RECOGNIZE CHINA.
England Is Not Ready to Follow America's Lead.

Great Britain has no intention of following the lead of the United States in recognizing the republic of China, the house of commons was informed by Mr. Francis Dyke Acland, parliamentary undersecretary for foreign affairs, speaking on behalf of the foreign office.

The British government at the time of the establishment of the present administration in China exchanged views with the governments of other powers regarding recognition, said Mr. Acland, and it was agreed that the powers should act in concert and that recognition of the republic should be conditional on the formal confirmation by the republic of the rights resulting from treaties and established usage enjoyed by British subjects. The British government, he concluded, still adheres to those views.

Boats Used For Funeral.
During the recent floods in the middle west and south a funeral at Columbus, Ky., was conducted by means of boats. It was that of a minister who died in a part of the city where all the streets were under water. A large rowboat, carrying the coffin, headed the procession. The pallbearers and mourners followed in skiffs.

WOULD DEVELOP SOIL RESOURCES

Object of State Conference to Be Held in June.

THE NEW VOCATIONAL LAW

Interest in This Important Act of the Recent Legislature Has Prompted State Bankers' Association to Call a State-Wide Meeting of Those Most Concerned With a View to Stimulating a General Interest in It.

Indianapolis, April 18.—The committee on agriculture of the Indiana Bankers' association has called a state conference on agriculture and country life in Indiana, and the meeting will be held in Indianapolis, June 3 and 4. At a meeting at which the preliminary arrangements were started the scope of the conference, a tentative program of subjects to be considered, and speakers who would be invited, were discussed. Numerous speakers were enthusiastic in their views of the opportunities placed before the whole state of Indiana through the medium of the vocational law passed by the last legislature. Some of the speakers were of the opinion that if the counties of Indiana would take advantage of this law it would mark new beginnings in the development of the soil resources of Indiana.

The bankers' association committee is "fathering" the coming conference largely because of the success many banks over the state have had in promoting corn shows in their home communities. The vocational law, in their opinion, opens still wider fields of activity for the advancement of both city and country wealth, if some organization will give such a movement a start.

It is proposed that the state conference go much further than to consider what should be done to bring about the teaching of agriculture in the public schools, which is the prime purpose of the new vocational law. The program committee proposes to engage some of the most eminent authorities and speakers in the United States for the five sessions of the conference, and farm credits, the development of home life, arousing greater interest among boys and girls in rural life and many other phases of farm activities will be considered.

The purpose of the conference is to bring together representative men and women who are in any way interested in the expansion of farming resources of the state. These will include members of all of the agricultural, horticultural and live stock associations and federations; school authorities, both from the public and high schools, as well as the state colleges; county officials, bankers, manufacturers and others.

BRIBERY INDICTMENT HOLDS LAWYER ANHUT

Charged With Trying to Buy Harry Thaw's Freedom.

New York, April 18.—Indicted by the grand jury for bribery, Attorney John N. Anhut, who received a fund of $20,000 to aid in securing Harry K. Thaw's liberation from Matteawan, gave himself up to the district attorney's office. He was arraigned before Justice Seabury in the criminal branch of the supreme court and held under $5,000 bail for pleading Tuesday.

There are two counts in the indictment returned against Anhut. The first charges the lawyer with aiding and abetting Thaw in offering a bribe, and the second charges him with offering a bribe. The grand jury found its indictments on the testimony of Dr. John W. Russell, former head of Matteawan, who told that body and the governor's investigating committee at Albany that he had twice been offered $20,000 if he would sign a certificate that Thaw was sane.

When Anhut comes to plead he will offer what Assistant District Attorney DeFord, who has handled the case, claims is a plea without precedent in this state. The plea will be a claim that Anhut's testifying before the committee of inquiry at Albany has exempted him from prosecution on a bribery charge. In case the court rules that Anhut did not get immunity from his testimony at Albany, it will be claimed at the trial that the money he received from Thaw was a matter between lawyer and client and an entirely legitimate transaction and that none of it was ever offered to Dr. Russell.

ANOTHER CRISIS IN MEXICAN SITUATION

Troubled Republic On the Verge of Anarchy.

Washington, April 19.—In the Mexican situation another crisis is now seriously apprehended by the federal authorities closest in touch with events in that country. Advice received during the last few days indicate that fears for the ability of the Huerta government to maintain itself are well founded and the greatest pessimism prevails in regard to the situation. The revolutionary movement led by the rebellious Governor Carranza in Coahuila and adjoining states is regarded in Washington as the most threatening of the numerous forces arrayed against the provisional government. The Madero family has cast in its lot with Carranza and will exert all its influence in Mexico and elsewhere in aid of the Carranza revolution. The northern part of Mexico is admittedly in control of Carranza and the state forces of Sonora. Huerta does not control all the southern territory, however, and has no troops to send against rebels in either north or south.

Foreigners are said to be closing out business connections in Mexico in even greater numbers than during the Madero and Orozco revolutions. Mills, factories and mines are being closed down and thousands are out of work in all parts of the country.

The collapse of the Huerta government is contemplated here in the light of the greatest possible calamity. It would bring to the front again those questions which had the United States on the verge of war during the closing days of the last administration. It is not believed that even the Democratic administration would find it possible to stand by quietly and see anarchy reign in Mexico.

Woman Burned to Death.

Bloomington, Ind., April 19.—Death by cremation was the fate of Mrs. Delmar Abram, twenty-one years old, who lived near Elwren. While at the home of Ezra Dye, one of the children of Mrs. Abram upset a can of kerosene. Mrs. Abram mopped up the oil as best she could, then lighted a match and threw on the floor. The flames ignited her dress and she was burned to death in the presence of her two children and the Dye family.

LITTLE CHANGE IN TARIFF BILL

Caucus Accepts It Just as It Found It.

BIG JOB IS ABOUT FINISHED

House Leaders Say the Caucus Will Conclude Its Work Tomorrow Night and Big Revenue Measure Will Be Called Up For Discussion in the House Early in the Coming Week—Debate on Free List Concluded.

Washington, April 18.—The alleged "meddling" of President Wilson with the party tariff program was again the subject of criticism in the Democratic caucus giving consideration to the Underwood bill. Every effort to amend the bill in important particulars, however, failed. On one occasion it seemed as if the Underwood leadership was about to be jolted, but the easy boss from Alabama arose in his place, contributed a few well chosen remarks, and his critics took to their seats beaten.

The caucus has made progress on the bill. The wool, silk, wood pulp and paper and the sundries schedules were passed just as reported by the committee on ways and means. Debate on the free list also was concluded. All that now remains to be disposed of are the administrative features of the bill and the income tax section. The leaders say that the caucus will conclude its work Saturday night and the bill will be called up for discussion in the house early next week.

A big fight was made over an amendment offered by Representative Bathrick of Ohio, providing that ready-made clothing should be admitted free. He insisted that as raw wool was to be admitted free of duty that a like policy should be adopted in the case of clothing. This amendment was defeated by a vote of 68 to 99. A substitute amendment providing a rate of 15 per cent on ready-made clothing also was defeated. The caucus thus retained the 35 per cent rate of the Underwood bill. Representative Decker, a new member from Missouri, severely criticised the president for his alleged interference in the framing of the tariff bill. The Missourian appeared to be of the opinion that Mr. Wilson should "shiny on his own side."

"My little son had a very severe cold. I was recommended to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and before a small bottle was finished he was as well as ever," writes Mrs. H. Silks, 29 Dowling Street, Sydney, Australia. This remedy is for sale by all dealers. Advertisement.

GOING AFTER THE OFFENDING ONES

Dollar Diplomats In Bad With New Administration.

WHETTING THE OFFICIAL AX

Certain Appointees in the Diplomatic Service of United States Who Are Said to Have Entangling Alliances Involving the Acquisition of a Little "Side" Money Are Reported to Be Due For Speedy Dismissal.

Washington, April 18.—President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan, it has been disclosed, are planning to remove from the diplomatic service a number of men regarded by them as having entangling alliances with the dollar diplomacy of the last administration.

Though no names have been mentioned up to this time, the men the administration has in mind mostly are occupying posts in Latin-American countries. Publicity given the case of Henry L. James, formerly of the state department, but now serving by appointment from President Taft as one of the arbiters in the case of the Quito & Guayaquil railway, a New Jersey corporation, against the government of Ecuador, led to the official statement that changes in the diplomatic service are to come. The proposed recall of James is merely the beginning of a general movement along this line. Mr. James, it was said, was found to have an interest in the railroad involved in the case.

At the secretary's invitation the Latin-American ministers are hastening to recommend the removal of Americans who fill diplomatic posts in their respective countries, and it is expected there will be a general demand for the removal of those whose activities have been greatest. The administration intends, it is understood, to eliminate those whom it regards as too closely associated with dollar diplomacy and those who have business interests in the countries to which they are accredited.

The withdrawal of three treaties negotiated with Latin-American countries during the Taft administration and still pending in the senate is expected soon. Secretary of State Bryan now has the treaties under consideration and from the nature of their provisions there is every likelihood that they will be consigned to the waste paper basket.

Two of the treaties are the famous "loan conventions" with Nicaragua and Honduras, which were the subjects of controversy during the last two years of the Taft administration. They are practically identical and provide for the rehabilitation of the finances of these two governments under conditions meeting the approval of the United States.

The third treaty is one negotiated with Nicaragua only a few weeks before the close of the Taft administration. This treaty gives to the United States the exclusive right to construct an interoceanic canal across Nicaragua via the general route which at any time should be selected by any nation that attempted to link the Atlantic with the Pacific.

HERESY SMELLERS RIGHT ON THE JOB

Orthodoxy of Young Ministers Is Questioned.

New York, April 18.—A committee of the New York presbytery has made public a protest against the presbytery's recent action in making Presbyterian ministers out of Tertius VanDyke, a son of Dr. Henry VanDyke; Philip S. Bird, Chalmers Holbrook and John A. Murray, all recent graduates of Union Theological seminary. The committee also made public its reply to the protest.

The dispute grows out of examinations of these young men upon their belief in the virgin birth of Christ, the resurrection and the authenticity of the fourth gospel. The protestants say that the young men showed "unmistakably that they do not accept the historical reliability of either the old or new testament." Also that they refused to affirm their "faith in the virgin birth of Christ as related in the gospels of Luke and Matthew, or in the raising of Lazarus from the dead as related in the gospel of John."

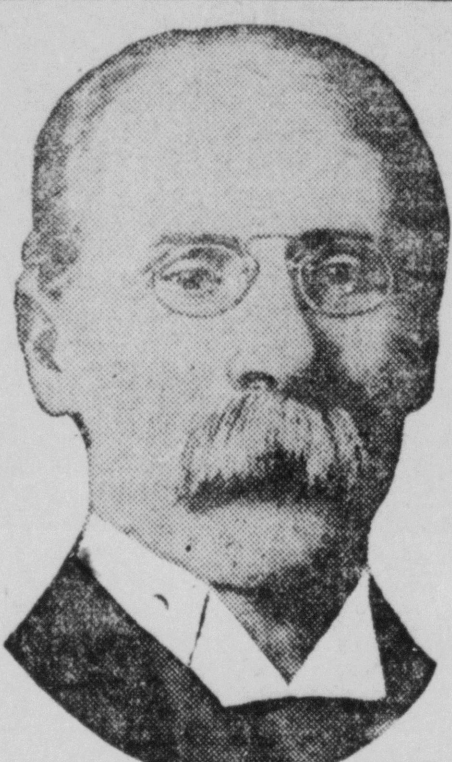

The committee of presbytery replies that the candidates declared they accepted both testaments as the rule of faith and practice, and that they believed in a God able to work miracles. Regarding some miracles in the Bible which are the subject of dispute, they felt themselves not enough enlightened to come to conclusions.

It is said that the protest will be carried to the general assembly in Atlanta on May 14.

GEORGE W. GUTHRIE

Former Mayor of Pittsburgh to Be Ambassador to Japan.

Washington, April 19.—There is no doubt now that the president has decided to send George W. Guthrie, former mayor of Pittsburgh, to Japan as ambassador. The president probably will hurry this nomination, inasmuch as American interests in Japan have been strongly urging the appointment of an ambassador to succeed Larz Anderson, who has returned to Washington. The Tokio embassy is in charge of Bailey Blanchard, secretary of the embassy.

JAPAN IS CONCERNED OVER THE OUTCOME

Pacific Coast Problem Is Growing Serious.

Tokio, April 19.—President Wilson's refusal to intervene in the matter of legislation by California against aliens being allowed to hold property and which is believed here to be aimed particularly at Japan, has induced the government to regard the movement as more dangerous to the Japanese than anything that has heretofore been brought up on the Pacific coast.

Reprisals are impossible. There has been some talk of boycotting American imports, but it is realized that Japan would be the chief sufferer in any such action, as the exports to America amount to twice as much as the imports. If the California legislature passes the bill Japan will possibly enforce its foreign land ownership bill of 1910 and will ask the United States to allow Japanese to become naturalized in that country, relying on the supreme court to decide whether this is permissible under the constitution. The government has not given any outward sign of intended action on this subject.

A mass meeting, composed of the most part of irresponsible people, demanded the most extreme measures of retaliation by Japan. During the gathering the singing of war songs aroused the feelings of many of the lower classes who were present. Anonymous writers in the newspapers give an outline of plans for the seizure of the Philippines and Hawaii and at the same time denounce the Japanese government's submissive attitude. It is said that the changed conditions in Japan make it impossible for the government to restrain the newspapers and the lower classes.

The President Not Disturbed.

Washington, April 19.—The clamor of 20,000 Japanese citizens in Tokio for war against the United States because of California's determination to eliminate the Japanese farmer and fisherman from her domain failed to shake the outward calm of President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan, in whose hands the situation rests so far as the national government is concerned. There is no one in Washington who talks seriously of any possibility of war between the two countries, but that the United States may acquire a new enemy is predicted. It is realized that the Japanese government is too sane to think of letting the present issue come to the point where hostilities might even be seriously mentioned.

Farmers say that the flood has greatly enriched the Wabash bottoms and a bumper corn crop is expected.

Chicago, April 18.—John E. Wayman, former state's attorney and candidate for the Republican nomination for governor at the last election, shot himself twice below the heart at his home in this city, and three physicians are working over him in a desperate attempt to save his life. The doctors say it will be a miracle if they are successful. It is said the shooting was an attempt at self-destruction while the victim was suffering from temporary aberration of the mind, caused by a nervous breakdown due to overwork.

"Well, Colonel Dunwoody," began the Hon. William Jones, "you didn't expect to see us so soon, did you? Reck on you'd ought to be all the glad der."

"You live here, my dear colonel," he continued, looking about him, "in much the same state and seclusion remarked by Mr. Gibbon in his immortal work on the decline and fall of Rome—where he described the castles of them ancient days, located back in the mountainous regions. But it ain't no Roman road you've got out there."

"I was going to remark," interrupted Judge Clayton, "that Colonel Dunwoody has anticipated all the modern requirements of hospitality as well as embodied all those of ancient sort. Thank you, I shall taste your hour bon, colonel, with gladness. It is a long ride in from the river."

Their host looked at them for a moment. "Are you here on any special errand? But of course there must be something of the sort to bring you two gentlemen so close on my trail."

"We met up with these gentlemen down at the river," began Yates, "and from what they done told us, we thought we'd all better ride in along together, and have a little talk with you. Looks like there might be trouble in these parts before long."

"What sort of trouble?"

"It's this a-way," broke in the Hon. William Jones. "The judge an' I laid off at Cairo when you all went on through. Next day, along comes a steamer from up river, an' she's full of northern men, headed west—more like a fightin' army than so many settlers. They're goin' out into the prairie country beyant an' I think it's just on the early bird principle to hold it ag'in settlers from this state. They're a lot of those black abolitionists, that's what they are! What's more, that Lily girl of the judge's here, she's got away agin—she turned up missin' at Cairo, too—an' she is taken up with this bunch of Yankees an' is mighty apt to get clear off."

Judge Clayton nodded gravely. "The whole north is stirred up and bound to make trouble. These men seemed to have taken the girl in without hesitation. They don't intend to stand by any compromise, at least. The question is, what are we going to do about it? We can't stand here and see our property taken away by armed invaders in this way."

Dunwoody remained silent for a time. Dr. Jamieson took snuff and looked quietly from one to the other. "You can count me in, gentlemen," said he.

Silence fell as he went on. "If they mean fight, let them have fight. If we let in one army of abolitionists out here to run off our property, an' other will follow."

"The south has been swindled all along the line," he exclaimed, rising and smiting a fist into a palm. "We got Texas, yes, but it had to be by war. We've been juggled out of California, which ought to have been a southern state. We are cut off from growth to the south by Mexico. On the west we have these Indians located. The whole upper west is a tight abolitionist by national law. Now, where shall we go? These abolitionists are even wedging in west of us."

Strange enough such speech sounds today. But as the gray headed old doctor went on he only voiced what was the earnest conviction of many of the ablest men of his time, both of the south and the north.

"The south has been robbed. We paid our share of the cost of this last war in blood and in money! We paid for our share in the new territory won for the union! And now they deny us any share of it! Gentlemen, it's invasion, that's what it is, and that's my answer, so far as my honest conscience and all my wisdom go. It's war! What's the next thing to do? Judge, we can take back your girl—the legal right to do that is clear. But we all know that that may be only a beginning."

The Hon. William Jones helped him self to whisky, altogether forgetting his principle of taking but one drink a day. "If them abolitionists would only stay at home we could afford to sit quiet an' let 'em howl; but when they come into our dooryard an' begin to howl it's time somethin' ought to be did. I 'low we'll have to fight."

"We will fight," said Dunwoody slowly and gravely.

"What boat are these men using?" asked Dr. Jamieson, turning to young Desha.

"Little old scow named the Helen Bell. She can't steam upstream a hundred miles a week. She ties up every night. We can easy catch her up above St. Genevieve if we ride fast."

"That looks feasible to me," remarked Judge Clayton, and the others nodded their approval.

Judge Clayton dropped into a seat, as he replaced his glass on the nearest table. "By the way, Colonel Dunwoody," said he, "there was something right strange happened on the Vernon, coming down the Ohio, and I thought maybe you could help us figure it out. There was another disappearance—that extraordinarily beautiful young lady who was there you remember her? No one knew what became of her. When I heard about that Lily girl's escape, I sent my men with the two bucks on down home, with instructions for a little training, so they would not try the underground again right soon. But now—"

"Now about that Lily girl," interrupted the Hon. William Jones, who had once more forgotten his temperance resolutions. "But, hello, colonel, what's this—what's this?"

He picked up and exposed to view a small object which he saw lying on the hall floor. It was a small pin of shell and silver, such as ladies sometimes used for fastening the hair.

"Somehow, I got the idea you was a bachelor man," went on the Hon. William cheerfully. "But looky here, now, what's this?"

Dunwoody, suddenly confused, could only wonder whether his face showed what he really felt. His guest continued his investigation.

"An' looky there on the table!" pointing where some servant apparently had placed yet another article of ladies' apparel, dropped by accident—a dainty glove of make such as no servant of that country ever saw, much less used. "Come now," blithely went on the gentleman from Belmont. "Things is lookin' mighty suspicious, mighty suspicious. Why didn't you tell us when you all was married?"

A sudden start might have drawn attention to Judge Clayton, but he controlled himself. And if a slight smile assailed his lips at least he was able to suppress it. Noting, however, could suppress the curiosity of the able student of Roman history. "I'll just take a little prow around," said he.

He was rewarded in his search. A little hairpin lay at the first step of the stair. He fell upon it with uproarious glee.

"Trail's gittin' hot," said he. "I reckon I'll go on up."

"No!" cried Dunwoody suddenly and sprang to the foot of the stair. "Please—that is!" He hesitated. "If you will kindly wait a moment I will have the servants put your room in order for you before you go up."

"Oho," cried the Hon. William; "don't want us to find out a single thing! House of mystery, ah, ah! Doctor here too! Tell us, anybody died here today?"

Dr. Jamieson answered by quietly stepping to the side of Dunwoody. Judge Clayton without comment joined them, and the three edged in between the exhilarated gentleman and the stairway which he sought to ascend.

"I was just saying, gentlemen," remarked Judge Clayton quietly, "that I was sure it would give us all much pleasure to take a stroll around these beautiful grounds with Colonel Dunwoody."

He looked Dunwoody calmly in the eye, and the latter knew he had a friend. He knew perfectly well that Judge Clayton did not for an instant suppose that these articles ever had belonged to any servant.

CHAPTER IX. The Arbitration.

IT was twilight when the little cavalcade from Tallwoods arrived at the old river town of St. Genevieve. The peaceful inhabitants, most of them of the old French strain, looked out in amazement at the jaded horses, the hard faced men. By this time the original half dozen riders had received reinforcements at different plantations, so that a band of perhaps thirty armed men had assembled.

Brief inquiry at St. Genevieve informed them that the little steamer Helen Bell had passed the town front that day soon after noon. As she depended almost as much upon poles and lines for her upstream progress as upon her steam it was thought likely she would tie up for the night at some point not more than ten or twelve miles upstream. Dunwoody, made leader of the party by unanimous consent, therefore determined to ride across the river bed at its shortest distance in the attempt to intercept the steamer, relying upon chance to secure small boats near at hand should they be necessary. His men by this time were glad enough to dismount and take some sort of refreshment.

It was dark when again they mounted, and the old river road, full of washouts, stumps and roots, made going slow after the moon had sunk. They had, however, no great distance to ride. At a point ten miles up the river they came upon a small huddle of fishermen's huts. At one of these Dunwoody knocked and the frightened tenant, at first almost speechless at the sight of so many armed men, stammeringly informed him that the steamer had passed late that evening and was, in his belief, tied up at a little towhead island not more than half a mile upstream.

"What boats have you got here?" demanded Dunwoody.

"No boat at all, monsieur," rejoined the habitant. "Maybe so four, five feesh boat, that's all."

"Bring them out!" was the terse order.

They dismounted and, leaving their horses tied in the wood at the road side, they went to the water's edge and presently embarked, a half dozen men in each of as many long river skiffs of the type used by the fishermen in carrying out their nets. Dunwoody and Clayton were in the foremost boat, and each pulled an oar. At length, at Dunwoody's quiet signal, all the boats paused, the crews holding fast to the overhanging branches of the trees on the main shore of the river.

"She's out there, just across yonder island," he whispered. "I think I can see her stack now. She must be tied up close. We can slip in on this side make a landing and get aboard her before she can stop us. If we're careful! Keep perfectly quiet. Follow us, boys. Let no one fire a shot until I order it. Come on, Clayton."

Inside the first fringe of the tangled and heavy willows the mud lay deep in a long, half drained pool of water which stood in the middle of the willow covered flat. Into this, silently as they could, they were obliged to plunge, wading across, sometimes waist deep. In spite of the noise thus made there was no challenge, and the little body of men, reforming into an irregular line, presently arrived at the outer edge of the willow flat. Here, in the light which hung above the river's surface, they could see the bulk of the steamer looming almost in their faces. She had her landing planks out, and here and there along the narrow sand beach a smoldering ember or so showed where little fires had been made. As a matter of fact, more than half of the men of the boat had preferred to sleep on shore. Their muffled bodies, covered in their blankets, might even now be seen here and there.

"Who goes there?" came a military call from the boat. "Halt, halt!" came from the line of sleepers suddenly awakened. In an instant both parties were under arms.

It spoke well for the temper of the men with Dunwoody, that none of them made any answer. Silently, like so many shadows, they dropped down to the ground.

"What was that, Kammerer?" cried a voice on the boat, calling down to some one on the shore.

"There are men here," was the answer. "Somebody's out there."

The night was now astir. Men half clothed, but fully armed, now lined up along the beach, along the gunwale of the boat. Apparently there were some twenty or more of them in all.

"River pirates, likely," said the leader, who had now come down the gangplank. "Fall in, men; fall in!" His voice rang sharp and clear, like that of an officer.

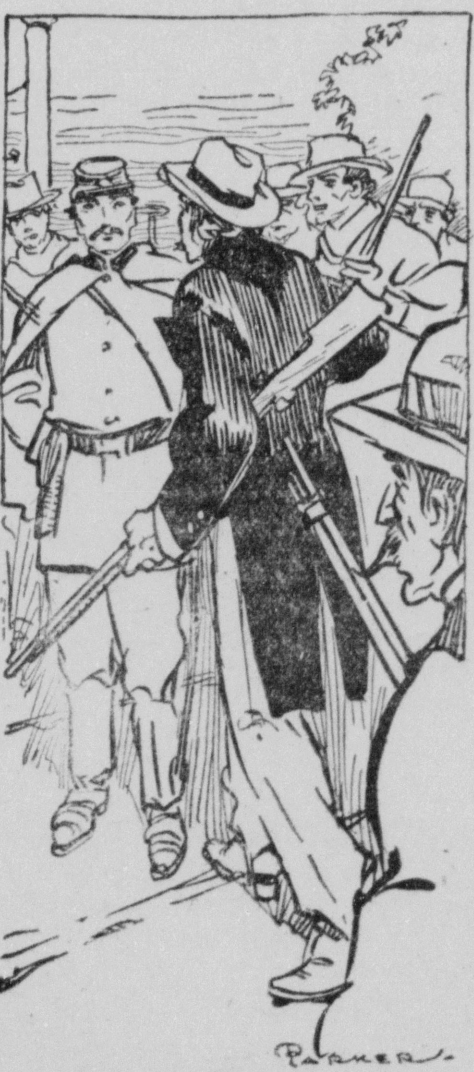

"Line up along this beach, and get down low!" he commanded. "Hold your fire! Hold! What do you mean? What are you doing?"

Some one had fired a shot. At once the thicket was filled with armed men. Some unknown member of the boat party, standing on the deck behind the leader, had fired at a movement seen in the willows twenty yards away. Young Desha fell back, shot through the body. His friends at first did not know that any one had been hurt, but to lie still under fire ill suited their wild temper. With a common impulse and without order they emptied their guns into the mass of dark figures ranged along the beach. The air was filled with shouts and curses. The attacking party advanced. The narrow beach of sand and mud was covered with a struggling mass of fighting men.

"Get in, men!" cried Dunwoody. "Go on! Take the boat!" He pressed on slowly. Judge Clayton at his side, and they two passed on up the gangplank and into the boat itself. The leader of the boat forces, who had retired again to the steamer deck, faced them here. It was Dunwoody himself who reached out, caught him in a fell grip and took away from him his rifle.

"Call your men off!" he cried. "Do you all want to get killed?"

"You pirates!" exclaimed the boat leader as soon as he could get his

"Who are you?" he cried suddenly.

breath. "What do you mean by firing on us here? We're peaceable men and on our own business."

Dunwoody stood supporting himself on his rifle, the stock of it under his arm. "You call this peace?" he said. "We didn't intend to attack you. We're after a fugitive slave. I'm a United States marshal. You've killed some of our men, and you fired first. You're no right—Who are you?" he cried, suddenly pushing closer to his prisoner in the half light. "I thought I knew your voice! You—Carlisle—what are you doing here?"

"I'm about my business," rejoined that young officer curtly. "I've been on your trail."

"Well, you've found me," said Dunwoody grimly. "You may wish you hadn't."

The northerner was not in the least subdued and remained fearless as before. "That's fine talk!" he said. "Why haven't we a right here? We're on a navigable stream of the United States, in free waters and in a free country, and we're free to do as we propose. We're under a free flag. What do you mean by firing into us?"

"You're not navigating the river at all," retorted Judge Clayton. "You're tied up to Missouri soil. The real channel of the river is away out yonder, and you know it. We're inside our right in boarding you. We want to know who you are and what you are doing here, an army officer, at the head of men armed in this way. We're going to search this boat. You've got property of mine on board, and we've the legal right to take it, and we're going to take it. You've killed some of our posse."

"You're pirates!" reiterated the northern leader. "You're border ruffians, and you want to take this boat. You'll have to account for this."

"We are ready to account for it," said Dunwoody. "Throw down your arms or we will kill every man of you—at once!"

He swung heavily back on his support as he spoke. Clayton caught him by the arm. "You're hit, Dunwoody!" he said in a low voice.

"Yes, a little," answered the other. "Don't say anything." Slowly he pushed on, directly up to Carlisle, who faced him fearlessly as ever. "Tell your men to throw down their guns," demanded Dunwoody once more.

"Attention, company!" called out the young northerner. "Stack arms!"

Silently in the dark, even in the confusion, the beleaguered men grouped together and leaned their rifles against this or that support. Silently they ranged themselves, some on the deck, some still upon the shore.

"Get lights now, at once!" commanded Dunwoody. "We've got men hurt here. We'll have to do something at once. Jamieson," he cried out, "are you hurt?"

"I'm all right," answered Dr. Jamieson out of the darkness. "Not a scratch. But there's a lot of our fellows down."

"Take care of them," said Dunwoody. "We'll attend to the rest of this business after that."

A dismal sight enough was presented when finally a few half hearted torches were pressed into use to produce a scant illumination.

Out of the confusion at last there might have been heard the voice of Dunwoody, calling again for Jamieson. There was work for the surgeon when the dead and injured of both sides at last were brought aboard the little steamer and ranged in a ghastly common row along the narrow deck. "Take care of them, Jamieson," said Dunwoody shortly. He himself leaned against the rail.

"You're hurt yourself, Dunwoody," exclaimed Jamieson, the blood dripping from his fingers when he half rose. "What's wrong?"

"Nothing—I got a nick in my leg, I think, but I'm all right. See to the others."

Jamieson bent over the body of young Desha, who had been first to suffer here on the debated ground of Missouri. He had been shot through the upper body and had died with little suffering. Of the assaulting party two others also were beyond aid. Of these both were shot through the head, and death did not at once relieve them. They both lay groaning dully. Jamieson passed them swiftly by. The tally showed that of the Missourians three had been killed, four badly wounded, besides the slight wound of Dunwoody.

Of the boat party, smaller in the first place though well armed, the loss had been slightly less. Two men had been killed outright and three others badly wounded, of these one, probably, fatally hurt. To all of these Jamieson ministered as best he might. The deck was wet with blood. Silent and saddened spectators, the attacking party stood ranged along the rail on the side next to the shore. On the opposite side were the sullen defenders.

Carlisle, the leader of the boat party, stood silent, with lips tightly compressed, not far from where Dunwoody leaned against the rail. He made no comment on the scene and was apparently not unused to such spectacles. Occasionally he bent over, the better to observe the results of the surgeon's work, but he ventured no comment and indulged in no recriminations.

The night faded after all, at last. Along the level of the water's surface came some glints from the eastern sky. The horizon paled slightly. At last a haggard dawn came to light the scene.

"Captain," began Dunwoody at last, turning to the commander of the boat forces. "We will be leaving before long. As to you, you will have to turn back. You will take your boat downstream, if you please."

"It's not as I please," rejoined the other. "You order us back from our journey at your own peril. I'm an officer and I'm on my own way, and I am therefore under orders. I was following a prisoner late in my charge when I fell in with this party bound up the river to the Kansas front."

"The courts may take all that up. This is Missouri soil."

"It's no case for courts," answered the other sternly. "This will come before the court of God himself. If it means war, let it be war. I admit that we have a fugitive slave on board—a young woman. I suppose that was the excuse for your attack."

"It was the cause of it, and we intend to take her," answered Dunwoody. "We don't intend to use violence unless it is necessary. But as to you, will you take your boat below and out of this country?"

"I will not."

"Very well, then, we'll take you from your own boat and we'll make her pay the penalty."

"By what right?"

"By the right of the long arm, since you insist."

"You would make us prisoners—without any process of law whatever!"

"You can thrash that out in your own courts later, if you like," said Dunwoody. "Meantime we'll see if I can't find a place that will hold you."

"Jamieson," he called out an instant later. "Clayton, come here. Take the roll of these men," he went on. "If any of them want to drop the thing at this point and go back, let them give parole. They'll have to agree to leave and never come back here again." To Carlisle he said:

"The temper of my men is such that you are lucky to have a parole offered to you. You deserve not the treatment of soldiers, but of spies. You disgrace your uniform. These men are only fools. But what do they say, Clayton?" he demanded, turning to the latter as he finally returned.

"They consider the expedition at an end," returned the judge. "Three of them want to go on home to St. Louis. Yates yonder is in favor of hanging them all. The boys are bitter about losing Desha."

Dunwoody looked the young leader calmly in the face. "You hear," said he. "But you shall see that we are not such ruffians at heart in spite of all. It's my intention to conclude this matter as decently as possible."

"The others are willing to return," continued Judge Clayton. "They want to know what their captain intends."

"Their captain does not intend to surrender," rejoined the latter fearlessly. "Let those desert who like."

"I am with you, captain," quietly said a tall young man of German accent, who had been foremost in the fighting.

"Good, Lieutenant Kammerer; I knew you'd stick," commented the leader.

"As to the boat, Judge Clayton," resumed Dunwoody; "what shall we do with her?"

"Burned boats tell no tales," here called out young Yates sentimentally.

"You hear," said Dunwoody; "my men are not children."

"It's piracy, that's all," rejoined the young leader.

"Not in the least, sir," broke in Judge Clayton. "We'll burn her here, tied to this bank on Missouri soil. The river fell during the night—some inches in all. She's hard aground on the shore."

"Fall in, men!" commanded Dunwoody suddenly. "Jamieson, fix up my leg the best you can. It'll have to take its chances, for we're in a hurry. About the paroled men, get them in the rowboats and set them loose. Get your crippled men off the boat at once, Jamieson. This couple of prisoners I am going to take home with me. The rest can go."

"But there's one thing we've forgotten. Where's that girl?" He turned to the northern leader.

"She's below in the cabin."

"Go get her, Clayton," commanded Dunwoody. "We'll have to be quick now."

Clayton found his way down the narrow companionway and in the darkness of the unlighted lower deck fumbled for the lock of the cabin. When he threw open the door he found the interior dimly lighted by the low window. Wearily, with unspeakable sadness in every gesture, there sat the figure of the girl Lily, around whose fortunes had centered all these turbulent scenes.

In the confusion which followed no one had a clear conception of all the events which concluded this tragic encounter. Dunwoody, Jamieson and Clayton cleared the men from the decks of the boat. The wounded hobbled to a place of shelter. The dead were laid out in a long and ghastly row at the edge of the willow grove. Meantime busy hands brought dried brush and piled it up against the side of the boat. In half an hour the Helen Bell, early border transport, was a mass of flames. In a quarter hour more her stacks had fallen on board and the bulk lay consumed back to the water line.

Why He Was Late

"What made you so late?"

"I met Smithson."

"Well, that is no reason why you should be an hour late getting home to supper."

"I know, but I asked him how he was feeling, and he insisted on telling me about his stomach trouble."

"Did you tell him to take Chamberlain's Tablets?"

"Sure, that is what he needs." Sold by all dealers.

Obituary.

Mrs. Malinda Louisa Williams Fox, the subject of this sketch, was born in Redding Township, March 10, 1867, and departed this life April 16, 1913. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Williams, who died when she was quite young. When she was eleven years old she went to live with Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Davis of this city. She remained there until she was united in marriage to Adam Fox, Jan. 16, 1890. To this union were born three sons, one dying in infancy. She is survived by her husband, two sons, Louis and Carl, one brother, Mr. A. C. Williams of Indianapolis, and two sisters, Mrs. John Akeret of Riley, Kansas, and Mrs. Ollie Smith, of Hendricks County, Indiana, besides a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Early in life she united with the Friends Church at Azalia and after her marriage went with her husband to the Akeret M. E. church, where she remained a true and devoted christian until the end of her earthly pilgrimage.

She was a loving and affectionate wife and devoted mother. Her entire life was spent in working for others, and in this she never ceased although her own strength was often taxed to the utmost.

She always looked on the bright side of things and her presence brought sunshine into hearts clouded with sorrow. In all her afflictions which were severe at times, she was always patient for Jesus' sake.

Servant of God well done, Thy glorious warfare is past The battle's fought The victory's won, And thou art crowned at last.

Mrs. Fox was a member of the Pythian Sisters and the Grange. The funeral was preached by Rev. L. A. Peck from these words, "Well done, good and faithful servant," Matt. 25:23. Services at the grave were in charge of the Pythian Sisters and the Grange.

Healthy Old Age Is What Dr. Hartman Advocates

men of to-day have just such symptoms as you describe. What does it mean?

Look at me. I am eighty-two years old. Sound as a nut. Tough as hickory. Do not know what it is to be tired. While I cannot do as much physical work as I used to when a young man, I can do a great deal. Probably twice as much as the average young man of to-day.

What has kept me so strong and well? I will tell you. I do not use tobacco. I do not use alcoholic stimulants. I do not use tea or coffee habitually. I go to bed early. I get up early. I am always doing something; something that occupies my body and mind. I love to work. I take a cold water towel bath every morning, winter and summer. It is these things that have kept me well and strong. You could be just as well and strong as I am if you would do as I do.

You may ask, do I never get sick, have I never had occasion to take medicine at all? Yes, I have got sick. Sometimes I feel a little touch of climatic trouble, like cold, malaria, slight catarrhal symptoms, but my only medicine is Peruna. I always keep a bottle of Peruna in the house. I keep a bottle of Peruna on my desk in my office. Once in a while I take some. I do not take it habitually. Take it only when I feel a little out of sorts. One swallow will perhaps be all that will be necessary, but it is always handy by.

It is a sorry sight to see the young men of to-day begin to peter out physically when they ought to be in the glory of their manhood and the height of their vigor. Eat plain food. Live frugally. Give up all weakening habits. Live as God intended you to live. Take Peruna when you do not feel as well as usual.

If you want me to I will send you a book which will tell you a great many more things about yourself and about matters that may be of great value to you. Enclose a two-cent stamp for postage and the book will be sent in a plain wrapper and you will not be troubled with any follow-up letters or advertisements. PERUNA IS FOR SALE AT ALL DRUG STORES.

SPECIAL NOTICE—Many persons are making inquiries for the old-time Peruna. To such would say, this formula is now put out under the name of KA-TAR-NO, manufactured by KA-TAR-NO Company, Columbus, Ohio. Write them and they will be pleased to send you a free booklet.

ILLINOIS SUFFRAGE PARTY ATTACKS MARRIAGE LAWS.

"Sanctity" and the Church Ceremony Are Denounced Bitterly.

The prevailing marriage laws, the so called sanctity of marriage and the church marriage ceremony have fallen under the condemnation of the women's suffrage party of Cook county, Ill., in which Chicago is situated. At a recent meeting of a revolutionary nature the women declared the "sanctity of marriage" as a term to be meaningless and drew up a positive declaration of their principles wherein is the following sentence:

"The time has come when the laws governing marriage no longer should rest on sanctity alone."

An open letter was sent to the legislature. In directing comment upon the sanctity of marriage it states:

"Under the regime of sanctity 90 per cent of the race has become weaklings. Under sanctity white slavery has grown to gigantic proportions."

"Easy divorce" was the slogan of the women. Here is an argument for "collusion and fraud."

"Men and women try to secure divorces for causes which they cannot talk about and for which the law does not grant divorce. Without collusion and fraud these women cannot secure the release they crave and deserve."

MR. BOSS IS "IN AND OUT" AND MAKES GOOD!

ANNA BELLE LANDS IN LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND!

Dear Friends:—Hurrah! We've landed after all and my first impressions of England are very good, indeed. However, although they talk in our language they seem to have a peculiar brogue that at times makes it seem different. Uncle Ezra has some relatives in Liverpool and we must go out to see them while we're here. Liverpool is a dandy place and it would be very entertaining just to go down to the wharves and see the countless large ocean steamers going in and out. The other day while there I saw a very familiar sight, that of some darkies unloading cotton. Uncle says England buys a great part of our cotton supply. Now, I must tell you about the first thing we did after we landed. Can you guess? Well, we went horseback riding and I'm showing you the cute little pony I rode. You know the Shetland Islands are just off the English coast and it seems that almost every English boy and girl has one of these Shetland ponies. We saw so much of the city in this way and of course, visited all the parks. Uncle Ezra is a fine horseman and of course, he also enjoyed the outing. I am showing you an English flag—and if you'll keep it with my collection of the flags of other countries which I'm going to give you I know you will enjoy it. Marjorie tells me that the SEWING SOCIETY is doing just fine and nothing could make me happier. I found a host of letters awaiting me here and you may know how I enjoy them. Have you gotten your Certificate of Membership in our SOCIETY yet? If not write me care this paper, enclose a two-cent stamp and I will be glad to send you as many as you wish for yourself and friends. This paper will see that I get your letters. Write often to your loving.

Anna Belle
